1980

Of Itzig and His Dog

Dannie Abse

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.2550

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Of Itzig and His Dog · Dannie Abse

To pray for the impossible, says Itzig, is disgraceful. I prefer, when I'm on my own, when I'm only with my dog, when I can't go out because of the weather because of my shoes, to talk very intimately to God.

Itzig, they nag, why do that, what's the point of that? God never replies surely?

Such ignorance! Am I at the Western Wall? Am I on spacious Mount Sinai? Is there a thornbush in this murky room? God may never say a word, may never even whisper, Itzig, hullo.

But when I'm talking away to the right and to the left, when it's raining outside, when there's rain on the glass, when I say please God this and thank God that, then God always makes, believe me, the dog's tail wag.