Short Dresses

ISSN 0003-4827

Material in the public domain. No restrictions on use. This work has been identified with a Creative Commons Public Domain Mark 1.0.

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0003-4827.2668

Hosted by Iowa Research Online
mechanics, farmers, gentlemen, ladies, children and servants, both black and white. There had been a good deal of sickness in the settlement during the summer, and more recently a few deaths, and there was considerable seriousness prevailing in some families. I should visit this place frequently, if other engagements would permit. It has been visited in one or two instances by a Methodist preacher.

On the Des Moines, in sight of the Agency, is a village containing 200 or 300 Indians. Their huge bark buildings present a fine appearance in the distance at twilight, but on a nearer approach by day they seem rather the haunts of beasts than the abodes of men. Not a tree or shrub, a garden or well, nor the slightest mark of beauty or comfort, was anywhere to be seen; even the wild grass had been beaten by continual tramping, till not a blade or root was left, and as the savages were away on a hunting expedition the stillness of death reigned over their desolate homes. There are several other villages on this and the neighboring rivers, containing in all about 2,200 persons, all that is left of the Sacs and Foxes, those warlike tribes who filled the whole frontier with terror during the Black Hawk war. These are to be removed to a region beyond the Missouri river. If by this removal they were placed forever beyond the reach of whisky smugglers and other vicious white men, it would be a blessing to them instead of a curse.—The Home Missionary, N. Y., Feb., 1845, p. 221.

Short Dresses.—The new costume for ladies is creating great excitement in the East; in fact, the rumpus is becoming general all over the country. Many approve—others find fault. But it's no use; the ladies will do as they please. The Bloomerites will carry the day, and French hats, Turkish trousers, and Grecian jackets, will mark a new era in female costume. This is a progressive age, and the short costume a radical reform. We submit.—Keosauqua (Iowa) American, July 12, 1851.