1981

The Sleeping

Lynn Emanuel

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.2691

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
The Sleeping · Lynn Emanuel

I have imagined all this:
in 1940 my parents were in love and living in the loft on West 10th above Mark Rothko who painted cabbage roses on their bedroom walls the night they got married.

I can guess why he did it.
My mother’s hair was the color of yellow apples
and she wore a black velvet hat with her pajamas.

I was not born yet. I was remote as starlight.
It is hard for me to imagine that my parents made love in a roomful of roses and I wasn’t there.

But now I am. My mother is blushing.
This is the wonderful thing about art.
It can bring back the dead. It can wake the sleeping as it might have late that night when my father and mother made love above Rothko who lay in the dark thinking Roses, Roses, Roses.