Love That Gives Us Ourselves

Stephanie Strickland

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Love That Gives Us Ourselves
Stephanie Strickland

—Muriel Rukeyser, 1913-1980

She said disowning is the only treason. She said we pretend coldness, or pretend we are used to the world.
She said
all I touch has failed,
and the beginning was real
She said by imagining
the child can cope with loss,
be at home.
It is a work of images, difficult and bare. Very slow. Like falling in love.
Desire shadows its fulfillment.
She said
now I speak only words I can believe:
no sly resonant pity.
Her short questions, the gravel of her answers comes back to me again
and again, in waves:
turn with your whole life choosing.
Everything here is real, she said,
and of our joy. Her mother didn't answer. Even past death language incomplete between them. Intense desire scorches its fulfillment.
Muriel, the ashes
rise, the ashes are flying.