1982

The Shore

W. S. Merwin

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.2860

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
The Shore · W.S. Merwin

How can anyone know that a whale two hundred years ago could hear another whale at the opposite end of the earth or tell how long the eyes of a whale have faced both halves of the world and have found light far down in old company with the sounds of hollow iron charging clanging through the oceans and with the circuitries and the harpoons of humans and the poisoning of the seas a whale can hear no farther through the present than a jet can fly in a few minutes in the days of their hearing the great Blues gathered like clouds the sunlight under the sea’s surfaces sank into their backs as into the water around them through which they flew invisible from above except as flashes of movement and they could hear each other’s voices wherever they went once it is on its own a Blue can wander the whole world beholding both sides of the water raising in each ocean the songs of the Blues that it learned from distances it can no longer hear it can fly all its life without ever meeting another Blue this is what we are doing this is the way we sing oh Blue Blue