Dedicatory Entry

Anton Shammas

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3028
Anton Shammas · Israel

DEDICATORY ENTRY

My father died in the summer, and the barrier
Between us has been crumbling ever since.

Now, in the fall, he stands like a door
At the edge of the no-man’s-land of my life—
The border before him.

This is what I tell the child
Trampled inside me,
This is what I tell the child
Standing before me.

My father stands like a door,
And of the three of us one goes in.
translated from the Hebrew by Judy Levy

GOODBOY

I
I am here according to the logic
of city and stones
And stones are my lips.
My hands are limp—
according to a logic of mine.
I hear the night she overlaid it.
Yes, I do hear the night,
and write drafts for the dead child.