No Visible Stars · Greg Pape

How can I begin to understand and speak of the human significance of the aberration of starlight, tonight when there are no visible stars.
I think, instead, of the giraffes standing in their tall closets in the dark, and the hummingbird with furiously beating wings under the frosted skylight above the unsleeping heads of the giraffes, and the man in uniform lighting a cigarette, locking the doors.
