1985

Secrets of Poetry

Jack Gilbert

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3220

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
NOT GETTING CLOSER

Walking in the dark streets of Seoul under the almost full moon. Lost for the last two hours. Finishing a loaf of bread and worried about the curfew. I have not spoken for three days and I am thinking, “Why not just settle for love? Why not just settle for love instead?”

A CLOSE CALL

Dusk and the sea is thus and so. The cat from two fields away crosses through the grapes. It is so quiet I can hear the light air in the canebrake. The fair wheat darkens. The glaze is gone from the bay and the heat lets go. They have not lit the lamp at the other farm yet and all at once I feel lonely. What a surprise. But the air stills, the heat comes back and I think I am all right again.

SECRETS OF POETRY

People complain about so many moons in my poems. Even my friends ask why I keep putting in the moon. And I wish I had an answer like when Archie Moore was asked by the reporter in the dressing room after the fight, “Why did you keep looking in his eyes, Archie? The whole fight you were looking in his eyes.” And old Archie Moore said, “Because the eyes are the windows of the soul, man.”