Notes on Contributors

JANE AUGUSTINE is a poet, fiction writer, and scholar who is finishing a dissertation on H.D.’s novel The Mystery. Her poems constitute the January 1985 issue of Staple Diet, and her short story “Secretive” is anthologized in Images of Women in Literature (Houghton Mifflin). She teaches at Pratt Institute in Brooklyn and spends summers in the Colorado mountains.

DIANA COLLECOTT teaches British and American Literature at the University of Durham. The recipient of two visiting fellowships at Yale University, she has published several essays on H.D. and her contemporaries and is currently working on two books, H.D.’s London and Images at the Crossroads. She is co-editor with Claire Buck of the forthcoming special issue of Agenda on H.D.

DALE DAVIS has recently published a book of poems entitled For You, From Me (Aphra). She is founder, Executive Director, and Writer-in-Residence at The New York State Literary Center, Editor and publisher at The Sigma Foundation, and board member at The Jargon Society.

SILVIA DOBSON was born in London in May 1908 but has been since 1960 a dedicated California resident. In addition to publishing poems and a novel, she has prepared an extensive annotated collection of her correspondence with H.D.

RACHEL BLAU DuPLESSIS teaches in the English Department at Temple University. She is the author of Writing Beyond the Ending: Narrative Strategies of Twentieth-Century Women Writers (Indiana UP) and H.D.: The Career of That Struggle (Harvester & Indiana UP). Among her poems and speculative essays are “Crowbar,” “Writing,” “For the Etruscans,” and “Otherhow.”

KATHLEEN FRASER is the editor of HOW(ever), a journal for poets and scholars interested in modernist/innovative directions in women’s poetry. Her most recent book of poems is Something (even human voices) in the foreground, a lake (Kelsey St.). She teaches in the graduate Creative Writing program at San Francisco State and lives in Rome a part of each year.

SUSAN STANFORD FRIEDMAN is Professor of English and Women’s Studies at the University of Wisconsin-Madison. She is the author of Psyche Reborn: The Emergence of H.D. (Indiana UP) and co-author of A Woman's Guide to Therapy. She has written articles on H.D., women's poetry, women's autobiography, narrative theory, and childbirth and is currently at work on a book on H.D.'s prose and an edition of the H.D.-Bryher letters about Freud.

BARBARA GUEST is a poet, novelist, and biographer who lives in New York City. Among her five books of poetry are The Countess from Minneapolis (Burning Deck) and Moscow Mansions (Viking); her novel is Seeking Air (Black Sparrow); and her biography of H.D. is Herself Defined: The Poet H.D. and Her World (Doubleday).

DONNA KROLIK HOLLENBERG teaches English at Simmons College. She recently completed a critical study of H.D.'s poetry and is currently working with Louis Silverstein on an edition of H.D.'s letters to Norman Holmes Pearson.

SUSAN HOWE is the author of My Emily Dickinson, a critical study of the work of Emily Dickinson (North Atlantic Books). Her most recent book of poems is Defenestration of Prague (Kulchur Foundation); a new book, Articulation of Sound Forms in Time, is due this spring from Awede.

FRANCES JAFFER is a poet whose most recent book is ALTERNATE Endings from HOW(ever). Her paper at the conference on Women Working in Literature at San Francisco State University addressed the impact of feminist scholarship on current innovative writing by women poets.

DALE M. KUSHNER has an MFA in Writing from Goddard College and teaches creative writing in Madison, Wisconsin. Her recent poems appear in Ohio Review and Black Warrior Review.

ADALAIDE MORRIS is Professor of English at The University of Iowa. She is the author of a book on the poetry of Wallace Stevens and essays on the poetry of Rich, Dickinson, and H.D. With Jane Cooper, Gwen Head, and Marcia Southwick, she edited Extended Outlooks: The Iowa Review Collection of Contemporary Women Writers.

ALICIA OSTRIKER is a poet and critic who teaches at Rutgers University. The most recent of her six books of poems is The Imaginary Lover (Pitt Poetry Series). Her writing on women poets includes the essays published in Writing Like a Woman (University of Michigan) and her recent book Stealing the Language: The Emergence of Women's Poetry in America (Beacon).
PERDITA SCHAFFNER lives in Eastern Long Island. In addition to essays published in such journals as Paideuma and Grand Street, she has written several forewords and afterwords for New Directions and Black Swan editions of H.D.'s fiction. She is currently writing fiction and family reminiscences.

LOUIS H. SILVERSTEIN is a librarian at Yale University, the cataloguer of the H.D. papers, and a free-lance bibliographer and researcher. He is currently working with Donna Hollenberg on an edition of the correspondence of H.D. and Norman Holmes Pearson.

PAUL SMITH teaches Literary and Cultural Studies at Carnegie-Mellon University. He has written Pound Revised (Croom Helm) and the forthcoming Discerning the Subject (University of Minnesota). He is currently editing with Alice Jardine a collection of essays entitled Men in Feminism.

EDITH M. WALDEN received an MFA in poetry from the Iowa Writers Workshop. She currently lives in Seattle and works as a technical editor for a major computer software company where she fights to maintain a semblance of the English language and a sense of poetic irony.

JOHN WALSH is editor and publisher of Black Swan Books, which has published to date H.D.'s Hedylus, Bid Me to Live, Hippolytus Temporizes, and Ion. Black Swan's edition of H.D.'s By Avon River will appear this spring.

CHARLES SIMIC

Unending Blues

"Short, perfectly shaped, Simic's poems float past like feathers, turning one way, then another..."
—Village Voice

"Some of the most strikingly original poetry of our time, a poetry shockingly stark in its concepts, imagery, and language."
—Chicago Review

"Charles Simic...is one of the truly imaginative writers of our time."
—Robert Atwan, Los Angeles Times Book Review

WOMEN AND MEMORY

Well-known scholars, artists, poets, and fiction writers explore the sexual politics of memory, asking: Who has the power to make memory and who is denied it? What is deemed worth remembering and what is obscured as unworthy? How are these commemorative and repressive goals realized? How should we interpret the common wisdom that women have better memories than men? Do women and men remember and forget different things, and for different reasons?

Nine Essays
Marsha Darling on the memories of rural black women as historical source • Jane Flax on the relation between gender and the repressed in psychoanalysis • Mary Jacobus on women and screen memories in Freud • Elizabeth Loftus on psychological studies of gender differences in memory • Esther Parada on women's memory in the visual arts (with illustrations) • Christopher Roberts on memories of death among Tabwa women of Zaire • Susan E. Searing on the institutionalized memory of women in libraries • Carroll Smith-Rosenberg on nineteenth-century misrememberings of Richardson • Catherine Stimpson on future directions implied by these essays

Arts & Sciences
ALBERT GOLDBARTH

"Arts & Sciences is a true cabinet of curiosities, bursting with historical oddments and imaginative speculations. Creator and curator both, this poet also ranges the emotions of surprise: the exhilarated tropes of nostalgia and grief, a voice instinct with startled fascination, an impetuosity barely contained by verse."
—J. D. McClatchy

"Goldbarth's poems, often dazzling in the Donne-like way they yoke disparate conceits, and almost always fearlessly playful in their approach, can mask the reasons for their being written. It's too easy to forget that for all of Goldbarth's bravura, the poems' punch lies in the way they affect us: over and over they tenderly remind us of the conditions of our humanness."
—Robert Cording, The Carolina Quarterly

Glassworks
David Wojahn

"David Wojahn's Glassworks is everything that metaphor ought to suggest — clear, thorough, resonant writing. It demonstrates, once again, that intelligence in poetry need not be a cold light nor a clinic for irony. This is work that explicates the emotion without exploiting it, work that builds, with patience, from the interior." — Stanley Plumly

Ronald Wallace

On Wallace's previous collection, Tunes for Bears to Dance To (Pitt Poetry Series, 1983):
"His work is not only sure in its craftsmanship, but humanly important in its subject matter and treatment. Best of all, it is exuberantly alive."
— Lisel Mueller
