1987

Chicken Little

Dean Young

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3525

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
A blue canoe setting off in sunset.
Left behind, we await her return,
news of fish that fly, gems big as hats,
flowers that eat meat.

Chicken Little

Yesterday the low-end guy on the steps with the new neighbor’s couch huffed between upward umphs about an asteroid due in 1992 or 3 to collide with planet Earth—a geyser of dust unfurling like a dropcloth between us and the sun, source of all life.
Or it could just nearly miss,
shred the stratosphere,
the already blighted ozone-rind.
Same old story: freeze or fry.

Once on Star Trek the Captain’s stuck on an asteroid that’s really a ball within a hollow ball, a people hermetically sealed and devoted to a computer gone ka-flooeoy like a cheap touch tone phone that dials 3 when you push 6 so you finally quit calling and wait to be called.
Anyway Spock’s only got a couple minutes to phaser or one of the quadrant’s thickest populations will be caroomed through but down there Kirk’s in love or McCoy’s in love or maybe even Chekov’s in love.
Upstairs my neighbor drags his stuff around so loud and stuttering it must be two things he shoves each time: the chair or table or couch and that thing inside that makes us sink in water and sleep, softens our harangues and puts lazy panic in our nightwatches.
Bright star! Would I were steadfast as thou art wrote Keats, coughing into a lacey thing, wanting a tender swoon of starlight to be himself upon his lover's breast.
He thought what was up was up forever.

I have this stack of TVs:
one gets picture, one gets sound, one does nothing but hum and the news comes through of a space cannon pointed the wrong way.
Down on the wharf a bunch of us are memorizing the waves, how they pick themselves up to throw themselves down.
Somebody do something!

WHERE DO WE COME FROM? WHAT ARE WE? WHERE ARE WE GOING?

From the richest dirt man first molded his world bowl-shaped, his bowl hand-shaped to catch the blood of marriage, hunt and birth, the ceremonious black-juiced spirit pricked from the skull with a beetle-jeweled pike.
At least that's one arrangement of pottery shards.
Last night a friend called whose separated husband came home to tear the sleeves off her dresses, throw a lamp through a mirror, knock a couple of her teeth loose. Then he