Our cover images are from “Think of the Color of the Sparrow—Open Edge Series” (1976), ink and acryllic works on paper by Ulfert Wilke (1907–1987), the first director of The University of Iowa Museum of Art. The works, 29” × 20” (front) and 29” × 21” (back), are in the collection of the artist's family. Mark Tade made the photographs.

The Iowa Review is indexed in Abstracts of English Studies, American Bibliography of Slavic and East European Studies, American Humanities Index, Annual Index to Poetry in Periodicals, Bibliography of English Language and Literature, Index of American Periodical Verse, Index to Book Reviews in the Humanities, and Modern Language Association Bibliography.

THE IOWA REVIEW ANNOUNCES THE TIM McGINNIS AWARD

We are pleased to announce an annual award of $500 in the name of Tim McGinnis (1953–1988), a former contributor to our magazine ("The Trail," Vol. 16, No. 2). This award is made possible by the generous contributions of his family and friends. Our intention is to announce a winner each year in our Spring-Summer issue, beginning in 1990, and to choose the winning work from items published during the previous year. We will consider work in any genre we regularly, or irregularly, publish, but will favor those that convey a distinctive comic vision. Also, in keeping with Mr. McGinnis's own circumstances, we will look each year for a writer who is not already widely published. The editor and staff members, in making the award, will be ineligible themselves. In some years, perhaps, we will discover no winner and so make no award; but we hope that will never be the case.
