Brooklyn

Edward Falco

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.3982

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Two Poems · Edward Falco

BROOKLYN

Street buried in it buried street talisman glass Coke bottle bits of metal summer tar sticks buried in it buried metal bright silver dull copper glass bottles glass buried in it

Stoop concrete uneven stones rise up above the plane jump stoops rise up above the plane metal buried in jump buried stoops a face in the window buried in the street stoop window

Stickball the kids skinny broomstick pink rubber buried in it the ball streets sticky tar metal buried in it bits and pieces tar windows someone’s face in the stoop window streets cyclone fence pinned against it cars horns bikes

Lampposts brown rising up over the windows stoops streets fences backyard brown paint flaking spin around spun legs around shimmy lamp-post stoop to window window even with the top of the stoop into a living room mom in there dad in there sister brother aunt uncle fence stoop window street buried under it in bits of bright metal plastic sometimes money buried under under it even now now after all these all this

MAGIC!

The circle we turned around the house disappearing piece by circle around we turned your news coming in a circle around you the news we turned around the house the words coming one by turning an incantation making the house disappear piece by piece by grass baked in sun barefoot the lawn-mower abandoned bright red machine piece of a deer’s skull mingled bones brought back by Sage from hunting the nearby woods a piece of red ribbon blown from another yard piece by piece the house unravels disappears our life in that circle the news coming slowly to hurt less at last spinning out the circle the news till yes at last the news and we stop walking and I laugh because there’s nothing else and you walk away from me and then back and I put the circle of my arms around you and you walk away chant-