1992

Dandelions

Pat Mangan

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4119

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
clinging to its fur were my own first matches over the toilet bowl wooden soldiers with their red caps first then black I loved the flash and fizzle flushing them down afterwards but no one heard the bear maybe it didn’t scream old anyway missing its teeth and came to see so they went right on when we heard the explosion we were still eating Well my father said they’ve shot the bear one hand on his water glass the big fingers opening and closing in the silence rays of dazzling light

DANDELIONS

Dandelions the first flowers I remember and after the trap door leading to the cellar where preserves were stored in blue-green jars the worst on her back she had to bend over to get under their roots calling them weeds spooning viciously or with a kitchen knife dig down she grunted like a pig she ravished the lawn once she got started dirt leaves stones everything flew out I saw marbles I had thought lost unearthed bits of colored glass crockery worms once even a garter snake hacked up then try to join itself I trailed along begging her Slow down slow down your back momma but she kept right on the loose skirts hiked above her knees hair wild her red face streaked with mud not one of them remained when she was done and sat weeping clutching her back And what are you looking at she said can’t I cry