1992

1/16/91

Jashua Clover

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4150

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
a spectacular machine. Hooray! Hats off—they’re making a window in the sand!
Mom’s in the tree—picture this—all alone!
Unforgettable kisses, comic book mnemonic kisses, O something’s coming out of the ranch road heat mirage. That drone—an engine? Mom quits practice & looks east, cups an ear to the beloved humming,
the hazy gold dust kicked wildly west
ahead of something almost . . . in . . . sight. Vroom!
It’s the Future, hot like nothing else, dressed as a sonic-boom Cadillac. O mom!
This land is your land/This land Amnesia—
they’re dropping some new science out there,
a picture-perfect hole blown clear to Asia:
everything in the desert—Shazam!—turns to glass, gold glass, a picture-window where the bomb-dead kids are burned & burn & burn

1/16/91

No matter how far we back away from ourselves
this scene will not reveal itself as a movie set.
Not the low building not the couple meeting out front
& not the desk clerk who is sick of it all.
The sign flashing dirty green/pink/off & on again
eludes through its perfectness—a dull trick—
the possibility of being a propmaster’s deceit.
STOP HERE / X-L MOTEL / STOP HERE.
Because this is all there is to know
we know that someone here is desperate.
By the Atlas Evening News it is almost morning in a different faraway city—a foreign city—while here night is just starting to lay out its necessaries on the nightstand:
a slow gyroscope doubling as an alarm clock
a lowgloss magazine & a certain number of shiny things unaccountably remembered as planets or coins.
We cannot believe the desk clerk's radio has just said something like “diplomatic bombing” as it crosscuts between correspondents & home.

There is a brief statelessness in all this fluxing where we can be exactly everywhere.
Lovers sliding in past the oily facade
do not believe in each other as much as they believe in Valentino & some fantastical Casbah—signs for that part of it all before desire broke itself.
The desperate ones know how all-that-refers must in the end rise from the bed of the real & ascend into the theatrical evening where our false light stutters neon neon none . . .

We are travelling into the new theology or rather this is what the couple is doing.
This is the time—finally this is the time—that it will be miraculously sexy & last all night.
The clerk will be stunned into a passionate life & hagiographers will surround the motel