

1993

The Spring House

Katherine Soniat

Follow this and additional works at: <http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

 Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Soniat, Katherine. "The Spring House." The Iowa Review 23.1 (1993): 21-21. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4223>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

Two Poems · Katherine Soniat

THE SPRING HOUSE

sits astride this spongy hole in the planet.
Sycamores whiten at dusk, fruit bats

home in around the pond, and there's one visitor that didn't make it in for a drink: raccoon at rest by the spring house, his scurry now settled into

carcass while the stove in the brambles sprouts a welcome of newly-warmed forsythia.

An unlaced work shoe, half-full of water,
leads me to look at my own bare feet,

damp with spring fever, the grass scattered
with feathers the mallard left, each quill

once a jade slash in white weather.
Tonight, new moon rising, this village

storefront holds sway as I pry open the door
on a dark wishing room of water.

Under these eaves, it will be afternoon
in a temperate zone all summer.