Notes on contributors and back matter, The Iowa Review, v.23 no.3, Fall, 1993
Notes on Contributors

TALVIKKI ANSEL received an MFA in poetry from Indiana University, and has been awarded a Stegner Fellowship at Stanford University for fall 1993.

JOCELYN BARTKEVICIUS lives in Iowa City, Iowa where she writes fiction and essays, teaches writing, and runs a martial arts program. Her work has appeared in a variety of journals, including Iowa Woman and The Iowa Review, and has been listed in The Best American Essays 1991. Currently, she is at work on “The Cartoon Lady,” a novel, and “That Peculiar Form,” a critical study of Virginia Woolf’s poetics of the essay.

MARVIN BELL’s forthcoming books are The Book of the Dead Man (poems), from Copper Canyon Press in March 1994, and A Marvin Bell Reader (poems, journals, memoirs, essays), from the University Press of New England in April, 1994. He lives in Iowa City and Port Townsend, Washington.

JOHN BENSKO’s book The Waterman’s Children will appear soon from The University of Massachusetts Press. He lives in Memphis, Tennessee.

A. V. CHRISTIE is a graduate of Vassar College and the University of Maryland. Her honors include an Academy of American Poets Prize and a fellowship from the Maryland State Arts Council, and her work has appeared in Poetry Northwest, Plum, The Indiana Review, and The Massachusetts Review. She teaches at Goucher College and is a Poet-in-the-Schools.

JOE DWYER received his MFA from the University of Montana. This is his first publication.

MARTIN EARL teaches at the University of Coimbra in Portugal.

LAURENCE GOLDSTEIN, editor of Michigan Quarterly Review, is the author of two books of literary criticism and two books of poetry. This essay is from his book, The American Poet at the Movies: A Critical History, to be published this spring by the University of Michigan Press.

TOM HANSEN teaches at Northern State University in Aberdeen, South Dakota. His poems and reviews appear in recent issues of The Hollins Critic, Whiskey Island Magazine, Literary Magazine Review, Home Planet News, and others.

LAURA KALPAKIAN, a frequent contributor to our pages, is the author most recently of Graced Land (Grove Press, 1992).

BRIAN KITELEY has been a Guggenheim and NEA Fellow. His novel Still Life with Insects was recently reissued by Graywolf Press. A section of that novel was included in The Best American Stories of 1988. Mr. Kiteley teaches at Ohio University.

CHRISTIANE JACOX KYLE was the 1990 recipient of the Yale Younger Poets' Prize. She is currently translating the work of Gabriela Mistral for a new collection, teaching at Eastern Washington University, and being a mother to her two daughters.

JAMES LAUGHLIN, who is sometimes called an American Catullus, shows in this set of poems that he may be an American Ovid as well. "Dawn" is from Byways, a work-in-progress that pairs Ovid with modern instances. His most recent collection of poems is The Man in the Wall (New Directions, 1993).

T. M. MCNALLY received the Flannery O'Connor Award for Short Fiction for his collection Low Flying Aircraft. His novel, Until Your Heart Stops, was recently published by Villard.

JAMES A. MCPHERSON has been hiding out in Iowa City for thirteen years. He thinks it is high time he moves on. A shorter version of his essay first appeared in The Atlantic Monthly.
PATRICIA MURPHY graduated from Miami University in Ohio with degrees in English and French and is currently working on her MFA from Arizona State University. She is the winner of the 1993 Greer-Hepburn Award in Poetry from Miami University.

SANDRA NELSON is the Editor-in-Chief for the Cream City Review. She has published over 130 poems and short stories in more than seventy-five magazines and anthologies. Recently her work has appeared in The North American Review, Sojourner, The Christian Science Monitor, The Virginia Quarterly Review, Yankee, Ms. Magazine, and others.

SUE OWEN is the author of Nursery Rhymes for the Dead and The Book of Winter, which won a national competition. She is also a recipient of a 1993 Louisiana Literature Fellowship.

JANET PIPER taught English for thirty-five years at Sam Houston State University in Huntsville, Texas. Now 91 years old, she has devoted her retirement to writing and publishing.

JOSEPH M. SCHUSTER's fiction has also appeared or is forthcoming in The Missouri Review, New Virginia Review, and Western Humanities Review. He holds an MFA from Warren Wilson College and teaches at Webster University in St. Louis, where he lives with his wife and five children.

FLOYD SKLOOT's novel, Pilgrim's Harbor, is available from Story Line Press, which will also publish his next novel, Summer Blue. A collection of poems, Music Appreciation, will appear in fall 1994 from the University Press of Florida.

EMILY WHITE is a Stegner Fellow at Stanford University. Her fiction has also appeared in Quarterly West, and her critical writing appears in the Voice Literary Supplement and the L.A. Weekly.

BORDERLANDS

Russell Banks and Chase Twichell

For the Winter 1993-94 issue of Ploughshares, Russell Banks and Chase Twichell have collected stories and poems that explore the borderlands of an increasingly fractured world. Banks writes in his introduction: “I have been drawn more and more to fiction by writers who see themselves situated in a society that puts every American man and woman on the borders of race, culture, language, gender, and class, and who view their world not from the privileged center of their own private Idaho, but from out there on the edges, where they are obliged to look both ways, as if at a dangerous crossing, and say what they see coming.” Correspondingly, Twichell believes “the planet—the planet that we often call ‘the world’—is socially and ecologically threatened in a way that’s unprecedented, and most of us, expressly by being as conscious of it as we are, are in nearly total denial. . . So I look for poems that aggress that denial, that fly under its radar, slip across the borders, plant bombs in its public buildings.” Order this provocative issue of Ploughshares singly for $8.95 or as the first of a three-issue subscription for $19. Works by nine fiction writers and thirty-two poets, including Jessica Hagedorn, Marianne Wiggins, Melanie Rae Thon, Margaret Atwood, Robert Creeley, and Paul Muldoon. Ploughshares is published three times a year in quality paperback, with each issue edited by a different writer or poet. Photo: Arturo Patten.

The lyrical masterpieces of Walt Whitman and Emily Dickinson. Longfellow, and Whittier. And “Go Down Moses,” “Shenandoah,” and “Casey at the Bat.” All the eloquence, passion, and humor of 19th-century American poetry—moving spirituals, love poems, patriotic hymns, American Indian verse, railroad and outlaw ballads—have been distilled by The Library of America in this unprecedented tribute to our native Muse. More than a thousand pieces by nearly 150 writers, from cherished favorites to unexpected pleasures, add up to a celebration of our rich cultural legacy—a unique, authoritative, landmark work overflowing with the treasures of America.
