The Iowa Review

Volume 26
Issue 2 Summer

1996

The Novel

Joshua Clover

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4584

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Joshua Clover

The Novel

A train passing through a blue forest; a dress falling to the field’s floor; blue hair falling through the field; safe in your cerule mnemon; the mendicanted men; the blue prayer; the Blue Mosque prayer; the prayer for sleep; the one ending History sleep yours is mine; the one never finished; the one never started; the one broken by rumors of war; the one broken by war; the one for pilgrims; one that starts A train blurring through a blue forest; safe in your cerule mnemon; one blue-tress’d and lately bluey endress’d; one you wanted more each morning to betray before coffee made you right again; against a wall pleading not yet, not yet; singing with a stone in her mouth; the one abandoned in the midst of A train blurring along a blue field; one beginning Umbrellas of sunlight confabulate and fall; the much better one beginning (after your return) Sombreros of sunlight; how the scissors hovered above the hair but in the sun; how the blue dress fell all night; the lesson and how it was learned; the blue dress in a field in a blue forest; five cornflower blue Octobers left in the field; left falling to the field’s floor; sweet azul medicina; one beloved for this; another; the two coming now up against the hotel wall; on the way to This book is not to be doubted; how you could not feel that thought; how safe in your cerule mnemon nothing did not elude that blue heaven; and all that time the mark was upon me.