Notes on Contributors

JON ANDERSON writes: “I am alive. I have no life. Who are you? I am fine. Don’t bother me. I am ashamed. Today is Thursday: Sunny.”

CHARLES BOCK is a recent graduate of Bennington College’s low residency MFA program. This is his first published short story. He has forthcoming fiction and literary criticism in Agni. Mr. Bock lives in Manhattan.

MARIANNE BORUCH’s most recent poetry collections are A Stick that Breaks and Breaks (Oberlin, 1997) and Moss Burning (Oberlin, 1993). Her book of essays, Poetry’s Old Air, is part of the Michigan “Poets on Poetry” series. She teaches in the MFA program at Purdue.

SHARON CHMIELARZ has had two books of poetry published by New Rivers Press, Different Arrangements and But I Won’t Go Out in a Boat, and a chapbook, Stranger in Her House, published by Poetry Harbor. She has published poems in The American Voice, Spoon River Poetry Review, and North Dakota Quarterly.

RAY DI PALMA lives in New York City. His recent books include Hôtel des Ruines (with lithographs by Alexandre Delay, Royaumont, 1993), 27 Octobre 29 Octobre (Format américain, 1993), Provocations (Potes & Poets Press, 1994), and Motion of the Cypher (Roof Books, 1995). The Advance on Mesmer is recently out from Sun & Moon Press.

SHARON DOLIN’s first collection of poems, Heart Work, was published by The Sheep Meadow Press in 1995. She is also the author of a letterpress chapbook, Climbing Mount Sinai (Dim Gray Press, 1996). Ms. Dolin teaches literature at The Cooper Union and creative writing at the 92nd Street Y and the New School in New York City.

MARK DOTY’s new collection of poems, Sweet Machine, will be published by HarperCollins in 1998. He’s taught recently at the Iowa Writers’ Workshop and the University of Utah.

WELCH EVERMAN is now Associate Dean of the College of Arts and Humanities and Associate Professor of English at the University of Maine where he teaches courses in creative writing, literature, film, and popular culture. He holds a degree in philosophy from Northwestern University and an MA in creative writing and PhD in English from the State University of New York at Buffalo. His books include a novel, Orion, a collection of short fiction, The Harry and Sylvia Stories, two volumes of literary criticism, Jerzy Kosinski: The Literature of Violation and Who Says This?, and two books on movies, Cult Horror Films and Cult Science Fiction Films. A second collection of fiction, The Adventure and Other Harry and Sylvia Stories, is forthcoming from Sun & Moon Press. He spends most of his spare time playing jazz trumpet, watching bad movies, and having a good time with his kids.

JOHN FELSTINER teaches English and Jewish Studies at Stanford University. He wrote The Lies of Art: Max Beerbohm’s Parody and Caricature, Translating Neruda: The Way to Macchu Picchu and, most recently, Paul Celan: Poet, Survivor, Jew (Yale, 1995).

SUSANNE GRABOWSKI writes: “I tried unsuccessfully to write ‘Indian Food’ three or four times the first semester of my sophomore year at Simon’s Rock. I knew the story but didn’t know how to tell it. The following semester, when I read ‘Lost in the Funhouse’ for a class, I knew I’d found my structure, and I wrote the first draft in two days, sitting in a bean bag chair, typing furiously, and neglecting my schoolwork. ‘Indian Food’ is dedicated to my cousin, Johnny.”

BARBARA HAMBY’s book of poems, Delirium, won the Kate Tufts Discovery Prize and the Poetry Society of America’s Norman Farber First Book Prize. Her work has appeared in TIR, The Paris Review, Quarterly West, Southern Review, and Parnassus.

CHRISTIAN HANSEN lives in Marquette, Michigan, where he directs a performing arts series, specializing in folk, blues, jazz, and international music.

LOLITA HERNANDEZ’s fiction derives from her Trinidad and St. Vincent heritage, tempered by twenty-four years as a UAW auto worker. She has an MFA in creative writing from Vermont College and a well-deserved BS from the school of life.

EMMANUEL HOCQUARD was born in Canada in 1940 and grew up in Tangiers. Among his recent books published in France are Les Elegies

FLEDA BROWN JACKSON's second collection of poems, Do Not Peel the Birches, was chosen by Gerald Stern as winner of the Verma Emery Prize from Purdue University Press and was published in 1993. Yarrow published a chapbook of her poems in the summer of 1994. She teaches at the University of Delaware.

MARK JACOBS is a cultural attaché in Madrid. He has published thirty-five stories in magazines including Atlantic Monthly and The Southern Review. His books include Stone Cowboy (Soho Press, 1997) and A Cast of Spaniards (Talisman House, 1994).

GORDON LISH's story in our issue appears in Self-Imitation of Myself, his third collection of short fictions. All of Lish's work is brought out by Four Walls Eight Windows Press which has just reissued Extravaganza.

WILLIAM POWERS is a member of the faculty at Michigan Technological University.

ROBERT SCHOLES teaches and writes about modern culture at Brown University. His essay on Beckett was written for a conference on literary interpretation at Groningen University in the Netherlands.

SUSAN SUCHMAN SIMONE is a writer and photographer who lives in Chapel Hill, North Carolina. In 1997 she completed a photographic and sound installation in collaboration with Jim Lee documenting the labor struggles of black workers in Chapel Hill. She also coordinates the Prison Pen Pal program for the North Carolina Writers' Network.
RON TANNER has just completed a novel and a collection of short stories. He teaches writing at Loyola College, Baltimore, Maryland. RYAN TURNER lives in Missoula, Montana. He's finishing up graduate school in English and creative writing. JULIETTE VALÉRY is a photographer, writer, and video artist. She lives in Bordeaux where she is director of Un Bureau sur L’Atlantique. Her photographic work is a major part of both Le Commanditaire (P.O.L., 1993) and—Allo Freddy? (cipM/Spectres Familiers, 1996). She collaborated with Emmanuel Hocquard and Alexandre Delay on the video Voyage à Reykjavík. RONALD WALLACE is the director of the creative writing program at the University of Wisconsin—Madison, where he edits the University of Wisconsin Press poetry series. He divides his time between Madison and a forty-acre farm in Bear Valley, Wisconsin. His recent books are Time's Fancy and The Makings of Happiness, both from the University of Pittsburgh Press. MARK WASSERMAN is an accomplished shoeshiner and struggling writer who has had work in Kansas Quarterly, Prairie Schooner, and Poetry Flash. TOM WAYMAN's most recent book in the U.S. is I'll Be Right Back: New and Selected Poems 1980-1996, published by Ontario Review Press in 1997. He is co-head of the writing program at the Kootenay School of the Arts, Nelson, British Columbia. REBECCA WOLFF lives in New York City. The Good Doctor
By Susan Onthank Mates
1994 John Simmons Short Fiction Award Winner
"Glowing, intelligent stories, generously encompassing. Complex people finding themselves at their moral crossroads."—Joy Williams
"A superb collection. . . . That [the] author is a doctor sort of matters, but this is no ordinary musing about medical practice. Instead, Susan Onthank Mates lets her medicine register in the deepest, most silent places of herself."—New England Journal of Medicine
138 pages, $10.95 paper

1997 Iowa Short Fiction Award Winner

Thank You for Being Concerned and Sensitive
By Jim Henry
"There is present a small speck of Donald Barthelme's alacrity, so that we often see through the narrator's eye during a moment of amused irritation. [Henry's] characters struggle with private dreams and demons and with public versus private realities. I think 'Congressman Spoonbender' is a wonderful story, and—as with so many of the stories—it's difficult not to feel uneasily, and perhaps a bit exhilaratingly, implicated."—Ann Beattie
152 pages, $24.95 cloth

Within the Lighted City
By Lisa Lenzo
"These stories are achingly lyrical but never sentimental, street-smart without being callous. Lisa Lenzo's stories have a strong pulse of feeling and a sly intelligence, and her angels, children, and lovers have an eerie radiance, a hard-won wisdom, that you can spot on any page of this book."—Charles Baxter

Wet Places at Noon
By Lee K. Abbott
“Lee Abbott is a significant American writer, one of our culture’s more compelling stylists, an acrobat of the word. Abbott’s voice has the familiarity of a front-porch storyteller, the voice of every guy in every picture of every high school prom who has what he wrongly thinks is a firm grip on life and love and from that point thereafter disappears into an unkind world.”—Bob Shacochis
194 pages, $22.95 cloth

Hints of His Mortality
By David Borofka
1996 Iowa Short Fiction Award Winner
“[An] impressive collection of stories. . . . Only infrequently does a book of short fiction have the sort of narrative power that rivals a swiftly plotted novel. . . . As story follows story, the book becomes a page-turner. . . . Moments of giddy redemption leaven the woes of Mr. Borofka’s characters, but the real miracle is the deftness, subtlety and humor with which he makes their many bedeviled lives cohere in a single vision of well-earned affirmation.”
—New York Times Book Review
237 pages, $22.95 cloth

Western Electric
By Don Zancanella
1996 John Simmons Short Fiction Award Winner
“At first, Western Electric appears to be conceived in defense of The Other. But dissonance is only part of its strength. Mr. Zancanella’s characters—the hash-house waitress whose obsession with astronomy leads her to predict the end of the world, the gold miner trying to console a grieving chimpanzee—are drawn with remarkable perception and control. All this book needs to be a heaven-storming work of art is a sense of inevitability.”—New York Times Book Review

Self Storage
And Other Stories
Mary Helen Stefaniak

Self Storage is a collection of nine short stories dedicated to the unlikely proposition that human relationships are still possible.

"Mary Helen Stefaniak writes with clear-eyed tenderness about the forces that drive people apart and the miracles that keep them together."
—Brent Spencer, author of The Lost Son.

Stefaniak is a native of Milwaukee, with degrees from Marquette University and the Iowa Writers Workshop. She has also worked as a salesclerk, a model, a U.S. Census interviewer, a soccer coach, a French teacher and European tour guide, and as Fiction Editor of The Iowa Review. She and her husband have three children.

The Millennium Hotel

In this captivating sequel to Rider, Rudman reclaims a sacred space for poetry. The Millennium Hotel is a world of dazzling imitations, a vast casino where personal narrative is recognized as a fiction and death always holds the winning hand. Rudman asks, “How not to be seduced by the new?” as he illustrates the intimate ways in which facade, gender, and memory inform both our private and public realms. Here the interlocutor’s voice shifts and freely crosses gender lines, especially in poems about early erotic experience. Mothers, daughters, lovers, and wives are passionately engaged. Its inclusiveness and wide range of tonal registers enable The Millennium Hotel to blend seamlessly the intimate, the social, the comic, and the apocalyptic. The book moves like a series of sonatas, melding childhood, the diaspora, and eros.

“The Millennium Hotel enlarges upon the themes that appeared in Rider and includes several of the same players and personae. The books build upon each other to create an increasingly rich linguistic world. Rudman is writing a sophisticated poetry of polyphonic voices. He engages the questions of the subject position and the construction of the self obliquely, in poems that ‘think on their feet.’”
