1997

Sand Sphinx

Eugenius Ališanka

H. L. Hix

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4893

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Ecoutez

coutez, whispers july, the days of this month are accounted for and there is one guard left to us, in the hollow of the vowel—white horse, rains receive the beaten grass, the east glints, a blow above midnight, we are driven till the reins draw blood by the red word of dawn, the hand cannot reach this flower, coutez, but we have no ear, and again reaping in the dew the scythe is sharpened and again the honey of earth flows over us

Sand Sphinx

hot rocks, through slippery shadow the voice dives into august, wind splashes in sails, the citations of day, and I speak from the palm: sand pours, building a bridge to the sun on your shoulder, only in this hour
can one read the handwriting of summer