1997

Enchanted Country

Eugenius Ališanka

H. L. Hix

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4897

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Tabula Rasa

who now will draw the clinking of crystal from glass: from the heaven of the glade where joy and ash join by the silence of sanctuaries, signboards over marketplaces, washed out by rain, what do they testify, innocent questions, surfacing like water-nymphs on wrinkled rough drafts, staying under the knowledge tree, waiting for lightning, for clear insight, one does not write impressions of hell, tabula rasa, the glass grows dewy exhaling the canto

Enchanted Country

drowsy apple trees, the wind still, in this country without warmth memory ripens slowly, and even more slowly does a woman conceive, in this country without an hour to follow daylight home, the glance goes wild, a rash breaks out, in this country autumn never ends