Treasure Map with No Spot Marked "X"

Ranjit Hoskote

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.4905

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Ranjit Hoskote

Treasure Map with No Spot Marked “X”

Master of first drafts, mason of untroweled walls, frugal householder,
he hoards the coinage of poems.
Circling the ruins, he hunts for the lost clearinghouse of fonts; he chases the smell of clay horses with patents.

Most original of minotaurs, he bellows, savage in a labyrinth of versions.
A magneto coiled in his own rage, he haunts the hall of mirrors you devise to seize him, retreats chafing from your locksmith gaze.
You’ll never tell concave from convex in this hell of inversions. I tell you, wherever you look is the wrong place.

The camera lucida moves to screen him.
Slashing through its jammed celluloid, you hope to grab the missing guru, the stable truth metallic behind the moving frame: the projector, agape, spews reams of looped film at you—a mujahid machine gun clipping out magazines of staccato laughter.

He has married an audience of images, proxies for epileptic watchers (the reels were mixed up when the projectionist was napping).
You match and docket the specimens for proof of polygamy: Garbo, nautilus, carbon, woodrose.
But when it’s time to pin the blame, turn your satchel inside out and you’ll shake out only shadows.

His trademark. Next, with vetch and kale, blue-green travelers’ tales, he sows a garden on the beach; caretaker of crumbling manuscripts, he needs neither cartridges nor identity cards:
he is the turnings of the maze, the flickering instants on the screen:
you are the catatonic, he the genius; he masks himself as you, you face yourself as him. Kabir weaves a shawl with no edge:

the horizon
is his garden’s boundary.

Helical Histories

Osmotic as an agora open to storm and tide and tread, to voyagers, merchants, sorcerers, our bed contrives, though seamless as a skin, to simulate our every nuance in its creases, until it folds in one calyx our separate fires, and we forge a ring of elbow room and breathing space for our wants to wrestle (my foot in your slipper, your hands in my hair) till there is no sense in which our speaking tongues and wet ears are any different