John Witte

Bестиary

Or was it just a story we heard growing up a child on the hot pavement by the chemical estuary someone ran or fell onto the turnpike at rush hour the tires hushing over no one stopping the words just words we get in and drive the windshield buttered with insects the sparrow in the grill the frogs at night like bubblewrap the animals arrive as in a dream beside the road warm to their touch a river of tar they pause and turn back or dash across rolling under the wheels the slick pelt the fut fut fut of cars passing over the flesh becoming paint or paste we have come this far together we have written the book describing each animal and closed it.