

2002

Spring Beauties

Ruth Stone

Follow this and additional works at: <http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview>

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Stone, Ruth. "Spring Beauties." The Iowa Review 32.1 (2002): 157-157. Web.
Available at: <https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.5554>

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.

RUTH STONE

Spring Beauties

157

The abandoned campus,
empty brick buildings and early June
when you came to visit me;
crossing the states midway,
the straggled belts of little roads;
hitch hiking with your portable typewriter.
The campus, an academy of trees,
under which some hand, the wind's I guess,
had scattered the pale light
of thousands of spring beauties,
petals stained with pink veins;
secret, blooming for themselves.
We sat among them.
Your long fingers; thin body
and long bones of improbable genius;
some scattered gene as Kafka must have had.
Your deep voice, this passing dust of miracles.
That simple that was myself, half conscious,
as though each moment was a page
where words appeared; the bent hammer of the type struck against the moving ribbon.
The light air, the restless leaves;
the ripple of time warped by our longing.
There, as if we were painted
by some unknown impressionist.