2002

The Counterfeiter

Amy Lingafelter

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview
Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.5585

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Amy Lingafelter

The Counterfeiter

Making counterfeit
U.S. dollars,
making love,
making the larkspur
definite are all the things you can do with a computer and a little fortitude.

I count half a mil,
you count inches
on my frame,
the little fortitude,
the powerful study.
Well, back it up,
you charming man.
I can count the ways
in which you fail
to back your shit up—on disk and paper,
with Plan B or numbers,
in words with deeds.

I count half a mil,
and succeed
in backing you up.
When it’s not enough,
we’ll make fake.

I only take up five and a half feet,
though in that space,
I am all that counts,
because of charm.
Because of charm,
I don't think.
Instead,
I bank counterfeit.
I wear nothing
except my socks.

I only succeed in my count.
My smell is larkspur.
My colors are red and purple.
My car and wine are American.
I will be a happy woman
the day I realize the secret to your charm
is my charm.