Augury

Kim Addonizio

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.5616

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Augury

That girl in the stilettos and tight dress is my girl, parading back and forth before my closet

in the precarious shoes she bought for the prom.
She thinks she has to practice being sexy. She can’t imagine the future

I can see so clearly: over the calm sea of the mirror, a thousand warriors set out, ready to kill or die for the sake of her beauty.

I can see how the tiny sails will disappear into the distance,

looking like they’re going under, swallowed by some jealous god or other. She stares intently at the mirror

but still she can’t see their ships foundering, their hearts being dashed on the rocks. Now she smooths glittery shadow over her eyelids, dark lipstick on her mouth. When she blows a kiss a wind drags

the waves up to a great height, before they topple over and crush any man who’s still alive.