2005

Saving One's Self a Lot of Grief

Boyd W. Benson

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.5982

ThisContents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
BOYD W. BENSON

_Saving One’s Self a Lot of Grief_

I hoard in a small box, decorative, yet not too

loud, those old sorrows, those true companions.

Unlike the old barber, whose griefs will bellow

like many mangy dogs, my griefs are brilliant singers and so delicate. They are small things, fine as spiders’ webbing, and quite mesmerizing.

I press them into my box, gently, one atop the other.

They spring back to my touch. It is an elegant, clever system.

Unlike the sorrows of others, which tend to tire the mind

too easily, you will appreciate and marvel so at my griefs

you will grieve yourself for not having them.

I will not be letting them go.