2005

Algren Meets Donoso

Kurt Vonnegut

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.6047

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
Algren Meets Donoso

True story, Word of Honor: Back in 1966, with the Vietnam War going on,
in September, the start of a new academic year at the legendary Writers’ Workshop out at the University of Iowa, I introduced the world-class novelist Nelson Algren, onetime lover of Simone de Beauvoir,
wife of Nobel Laureate Jean-Paul Sartre,
to the world-class novelist José Donoso, nickname “Pepe,”
both of them now in Heaven.

We three had all gone bust,
and so had come to work as teachers
of Creative Writing.
I explained to Nelson
that José, that Pepe, was from Chile.
Nelson thought a moment,
possibly about Simone de Beauvoir.
And then he said to José, to Pepe,
“It must be nice to come from a country
that long and narrow.”