Lie Still Lady Moth in Our Wedlock Bed

Lucy Anderton

Follow this and additional works at: https://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation
Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.6063
LUCY ANDERTON

Lie Still Lady Moth in Our Wedlock Bed

Cheap wings don’t make it here. Duck bites the moon and escapes. There’s a broken fence

shining, the grease

from Rapunzel’s hair and hands never seemed

as long as that yet
yours reach me.

Shake. Spin
a rush of pursed

affections. Love.
Velour and the point

where cotton grew
from hands that picked

it. You old Daisy. We loved each other once:

you were my sweet
heart and then a cloud

ate you. Quel Tango! Quel Cocoon! Choked up in ropes, a sparrow
strung its heart about the branches in a wild confusion of courtship.

There are juries for such squabbles, and sweet, I mean sweet, moments in theatres. Slide over here. Let me pull

the splinter from your

bite. You believe me, don’t you?

This old
oven heart?