HARRY SHERMAN LONGLEY, rector and bishop died April 4, 1944, in Charleston, West Virginia, where he had resided with his only son, the Rev. Harry S. Longley, Jr. since retirement on November 1, 1943 as bishop of the Episcopal diocese of Iowa after fourteen years service in that capacity; born in Cohoes, New York, September 10, 1868, the son of John Thompson Longley and Maria Elizabeth Fulton Longley; educated in public and Episcopalian parochial schools in Troy, New York and attended St. Stephen's college, now known as Bard college, and a division of Columbia University, receiving his B. A. and M. A. degrees; received his theological training in the General Theological Seminary, New York, graduating in 1894; also receiving an honorary degree of Doctor of Divinity in 1912 and an S. T. D. in 1920 from the same seminary; ordained a deacon by Bishop William Croswell Doane at Albany September 19, 1894, and a priest in the Cathedral there by the same bishop June 8, 1895; married to Hattie Eliza Minkler of Waterford, New York, September 24, 1894; after serving in the parish at Troy, went to Milford, Mass., as pastor from 1896 to 1899, then at Binghampton, New York, until 1911, and at Evanston, Ill., from 1911 until his election as suffragan bishop of Iowa, making his home in Des Moines until after the death of Bishop Theodore N. Morrison; made coadjutor bishop with right of succession in 1917, automatically succeeding Bishop Morrison, becoming the fourth bishop of Iowa; served as a trustee of Seabury-Western Theological seminary, Evanston, Ill., Grinnell college and St. Monica's Home at Des Moines; a 33rd degree Mason and past Grand chaplin of the New York state grand lodge. Surviving are the widow and the son, the burial being at Troy, New York.

JOHN ADLEY HULL, retired army officer and jurist, died in Walter Reed hospital in Washington, D. C., April 17, 1944; born at Bloomfield, Davis county, Iowa, August 7, 1874, a son of former congressman, Capt. J. A. T. Hull and Emma Gertrude Gregory Hull; resided with his parents at 1203 East Grand avenue, Des Moines and attended the University of Iowa, receiving Ph. B. degree in 1895 and LL. B. in 1896; practiced law at Des Moines; married Norma Bowler King of Okemah, Oklahoma, Sept. 21, 1919 and had one son, John Bowler Hull; while serving as captain in the Iowa National Guard was appointed lieutenant colonel judge advocate of volunteers on May 9, 1898 and honorably discharged April 17, 1899; appointed major judge advocate April 17, 1899 and vacated April 4, 1901; served as major judge advocate U. S. army from February 2, 1901, lieutenant colonel April 16, 1903, colonel February 15, 1911; appointed judge advocate general with rank of major general in December 1924, and retired from the army on November 15, 1928; legal adviser to governor general of the Philippine Islands 1930-1932; associate justice supreme court of Philippine Islands after June 1, 1932; afterwards had further service there in relation to the insular possessions of the United States; during World War I was judge advocate of the service of supply, also as director of renting, requisition, claims service and finance officer of the America Expeditionary forces in France; received the distinguished service medal, the British orders of St. Michael and St. George, the French Legion of Honor, Serbia’s order of St. Peter and other awards; retired in 1928 from active service in the army, having retained his voting residence at Des Moines all the years of his army life, but in recent years resided in Washington, D. C.

OLAF MARTIN OLSON, pharmacist and civic leader, died at his home in Fort Dodge, Iowa, February 8, 1944, where he had resided more than 70 years; born on the family estate, Five, located near Stenkjer, Norway, on June 29, 1849; attended schools of that community, and at the age of 20 came to America and directly to Fort Dodge; attended the Philadelphia School of Pharmacy, graduating in 1876 winning a special medal for scholarship; a successful businessman in Fort Dodge for more than a half century as a druggist, one of the founders of the Fort Dodge Light & Power Company and the Fort Dodge Telephone Company, the Fort Dodge Hotel Company, the Olson Land Company and banking enterprises; active in civic affairs he became a philanthropist, the Lutheran hospital and the First Congregational church being principal among the many beneficiaries of his far reaching generosity; he was instrumental in the building of a nurses home and each year has made the hospital large gifts of equipment; he was a musician and his hobby was botany, a beautiful park set with rare trees and shrubbery being a gift to the city; founded the Grieg Mandskor at Fort Dodge more than a half century ago, and for years honorary president of the Norwegian Singers Association of America, the King of Norway recognizing his services in the field of music with a knighthood, visiting Norway to receive the honor, one of four trips to the mother country; in 1895 married to Luch Demming Merrill, who died in 1904; 37 years ago married Julie Haskell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. E. Haskell, pioneer citizens.

JOSEPH S. MORGAN, publisher and public official, died at his home in Dubuque, Iowa, February 21, 1944; born at Dubuque, January 23, 1854, the son of Stephen and Catherine Morgan, who came to Dubuque from Ireland in 1846; attended the public schools and graduated from Bayless Business college; made the acquaintance of Congressman William B. Allison, who obtained for him appointment as a page in the United States senate, and two years later