2009

A Dictionary of Wooing and Deception in the Voice of the Sociopath

Jennifer Militello

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
A Dictionary of Wooing and Deception in the Voice of the Sociopath

It takes so long to go bad, here in this glad world.
If I loom, what I hate holes up inside me.
I feel where it is broken like a rib. I feel where it fibs in order to be related.
It follows me home, nose to the scent.
The cat in me is scratching at my tongue.

Let in, it will win you over. Let go and you will feel yourself grow older as the knives in me describe the knives you know.

Godless, I am most real. Healed, I am most ill. Filth is my most honest hour.
The eye of me contains all I am loosely.

The eye of me is hardly mine. It is a gallery for the overripe. It invents our lives from five dimensions. Unlike the heart, its crowbars pry. I am not I.
I barter with the periphery. It is the puncture in me that mouths the translation.

What I read in the entrails. What the blood reds become. My eye contains an afternoon. Its dry mouth made of autumn. I lick at my wounds. I never cool. I have become the evidence, I have become degrees. The teams of horses set loose are my silence. What tension threads itself like nectar from my wounds. A man is a house of cards. A man like a jar, filling slowly. Like wire, like a vial of warmth. My blood has been sleet the way it falls in winter. Onto the canvas as two mediums at once.