FRIDA KAHLO’S GHOST AT THE ALGONQUIN SINGING DOROTHY PARKER’S “I DON’T CARE WHAT’S WRITTEN ABOUT ME SO LONG AS IT ISN’T TRUE” WITH A MEXICAN ACCENT.

Surely you’ve noticed that I loved to be photographed and that in virtually every photo
I look foreign to my locale and foreign to my era. Here I am again, centered in what furnishes my unmaking, ribbons of song, pure prosthetic presence.

Wouldn’t any photographer tell you that the subject is most radiant if pictured at the head of the table?
That’s why I’ve come back to tell you that the round table is an occultation.
We should break it down: its edges, like those of the bed that holds the invalid should fall abruptly away so that the center of the picture brooks no absence and adorns its own legend.
