Fall 2012

The Art Of Bell Ringing

Desirée Alvarez

Follow this and additional works at: http://ir.uiowa.edu/iowareview

Part of the Creative Writing Commons

Recommended Citation

Available at: https://doi.org/10.17077/0021-065X.7186

This Contents is brought to you for free and open access by Iowa Research Online. It has been accepted for inclusion in The Iowa Review by an authorized administrator of Iowa Research Online. For more information, please contact lib-ir@uiowa.edu.
THE ART OF BELL RINGING

At his life’s end, Roosevelt wears his greatcoat for his last meeting with the king.

Old snow in the diorama in Diekirch never melts. Soldiers in white bedsheets push the boat night after night to the river crossing.

What is forgiveness.
A smoking mirror in the war museum, a yellow field of rapeseed spreading.

I no longer want to know the human names of things.

Children picnicking in woods under big trees find the piles of metal helmets, even boots with the tibiae of soldiers still inside. They take home a basket full of bones.

Brâncuşi will not come again to work at his anvil, carve his oak, broil his steak at the stove he built.

In his Paris studio on a wooden bench rests the marble oval of a face.

On the Hudson River the boy writes his mother— I am in a great hurry. I found two bird’s nests. I took one egg.